Polk County Dental Association The Role of Endodontics in Traumatic Dental Injuries

Chris Kersey, D.M.D.

Traumatic injuries to the teeth can result in damage in many dental and periradicular structures. There are many considerations in the management and consequences of traumatic injuries. It is not impossible to make guarantees in long term retention of traumatized teeth. However, the correct and timely treatment can maximize the chances for success. This presentation will focus on the role of the dentinopulpal complex in the pathogenesis of disease due to traumatic dental injuries and how treatment can contribute to favorable healing outcomes.

Originally from Auburndale, Florida, Dr. Kersey attended Florida State University receiving a Bachelor's Degree in Exercise Science. Next he attended University of Louisville for Dental School. After completing his DMD program, he did one year AEGD residency at Wright Patterson AFB followed by three years of service in the USA at Maxwell AFB. After completing his service he returned to University of Louisville to complete a residency in Endodontics. After graduating, Dr. Kersey and his family decided to move closer to home. Dr. Kersey and his wife live in Lakeland with three children.
